Course Description: Organizational behavior is a field of study that seeks to understand, explain, and improve human behavior in organizations. This course explores the behavior of people in organizations as individual actors and also as groups. Its purpose is to provide an understanding of how organizations can be managed more effectively and at the same time enhance the quality of employees work life. Topics include motivation, rewarding behavior, stress, individual and group behavior, conflict, power and politics, leadership, job design, organizational structure, decision-making, communication and organizational change and development. Most organizations focus their efforts on improving two aspects of human behavior: (1) job performance—the degree to which individuals perform the behaviors needed for the organization to achieve its goals; and (2) organizational commitment—the degree to which employees remain loyal to the organization rather than seeking employment elsewhere. This course will guide you through a model that seeks to explain these two areas of organizational behavior.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

After completing this course, you will be able to:

1. Identify and define organizational behavior (OB) concepts.
2. Be able to understand and analyze how organizations and the people within them work.
3. Be able to apply OB concepts to real-world problems faced by managers.
4. Understand individual behavior in organizations, including diversity, attitudes, job satisfaction, emotions, moods, personality, values, perception, decision making, and motivational theories.
5. Understand group behavior in organizations, including communication, leadership, power and politics, conflict, and negotiations.
6. Understand the organizational system, including organizational structures, culture, human resources, and change.
